Selected Tuesday by the School Directors as

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

On Fourth Ballot—Prof. Wright's Address—Hon. J. H. Longenecker Presides Over Convention.

In response to the call of Superintendent J. Anson Wright the Directors of the county assembled at the court house Tuesday afternoon to select a County Superintendent of the schools of the county for three years from June 1.

The convention was called to order by Professor Wright, and a permanent organization was effected by the election of Hon. J. H. Longenecker as President, and Dr. L. D. Blackwelder Secretary. J. A. Biddle of Loysburg and J. C. Stoler of Saxton were appointed Tellers.

Before leaving the rostrum Superintendent Wright expressed his gratitude for the honor enjoyed by him during the past nine years, and his appreciation of the confidence he has had and the hearty support and co-operation, after which Judge Longenecker briefly thanked the convention for the honor conferred in electing him chairman and announced that nominations were in order.

Dr. J. G. Candler of Rainsburg presented the name of H. L. Rinehart of Everett, Michael Wendel of Pleasantville nominated L. H. Hinkle, Jacob Rice of Monroe named Victor E. P. Barkman, E. S. Grace nominated E. S. Rice of Liberty, W. F. Benner presented the name of H. D. Metzger of Saxton, and J. A. Erhart of Hyndman was nominated by M. H. Kramer, Esq.

The fourth ballot resulted in 121 votes for Mr. Barkman, who, having a majority of all votes cast (210) was declared elected. Mr. Hinkle stood second with 66 votes. The contest was for the most part friendly and the convention was orderly.

The newly-elected Superintendent is well qualified to discharge the duties that will rest upon him, and should have the support and co-operation of teachers, directors and all interested in our school system. He has the best wishes of The Gazette and shall have any assistance we may be able to render.

William F. Barclay Injured
William F. Barclay, son of our townsman J. J. Barclay, Esq., had his left leg broken in Massachusetts on Thursday of last week. Mr. Barclay is a division engineer on the Boston and Albany road, and in his official capacity was making a tour of inspection on a motor car, accompanied by the supervisor of the road and his brother, Joseph F. Barclay of Bedford, who is his guest.

They had passed over the 47 miles of the division and were on the return trip when about ten miles from Springfield they struck a horse that was being driven by a drunken man who could easily have gotten out of the road. The car was demolished and the occupants thrown out. Though all were more or less bruised Mr. Barclay was the only one to suffer severe injury.

After the accident a train was flagged and the injured man was taken to Mercy Hospital, Springfield, where he was cared for by the hospital physician and the physician of the railroad. The fracture is above the knee but extends into the joint.

Cumberland Excursion

About 100 persons left Bedford Wednesday evening on the special train to Cumberland, to see "Ben-Hur." When the train reached Cumberland it carried 189 and, returning, it left Cumberland with 226.

This proves that occasional excursions to Cumberland will both pay the company and give the people of the county an opportunity to get away from the too constant routine. Let us have more of them.

The excursionists were all well pleased with the play as well as with the well-adapted play house and the courteous treatment on the part of the management.

USEFUL TO KNOW

To drop medicine easily cut a groove along the side of the cork of a medicine bottle; put back in the bottle and it will be easy to count the drops one by one, without pouring too fast.

To keep shoe laces from untying, lace up the shoe or oxford to the top, then take a damp cloth and rub over the ends of the laces or ribbon and tie in the usual bow, and they will stay tied all day.

The sharp corners on the heels of new shoes are constantly catching in the skirt binding and tripping one. This may be prevented by taking a sharp knife and slightly rounding off both corners. It is easily done and does not affect the appearance of the heel. This not only saves the skirt binding, but may prevent a serious fall.

An easy and quick way to remove a label from any sort of bottle is to fill with warm water. The heat softens the glue and the label will pull off instantly.

Wind a piece of tape or narrow ribbon once around the neck of the bottle; then, holding the bottle firmly, draw the tape rapidly back and forth. The friction thus created heats the neck of the bottle, causing it to expand, whereby the stopper is loosened, and may be readily withdrawn.

If, when cleaning woodwork or painted walls, you will begin at the bottom and work upward, you will not be troubled with streaks caused by the clean soapy water trickling down the unwashed portions.

To remove ink from mahogany and rosewood put six drops of spirits of niter into a spoonful of water and apply with a feather. As soon as ink disappears rub immediately with a cold, wet cloth.

Those who have aluminum cooking utensils in their kitchen will find that they can make their silver look like new by simply boiling it in clean water in an aluminum dish. It is the cheapest, best and quickest silver polish in existence.

OF UNTOLD VALUE

The Information Contained in This Citizen's Statement Is Priceless.

The hale, the hearty, the strong can afford to toss this paper to one side impatiently when they read the following, but any sufferer in Bedford who has suffered hours of torture caused by kidney complaint will stand in his own light if he does not follow the valuable advice offered here.

Mrs. John Harnisfager, living on John St., Bedford, Pa., says: "My daughter had been in poor health for many years. She had severe pains in her sides and at times these were so acute that she was forced to take to her bed. She was nervous and often very dizzy. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, and I decided to give them to her. I procured a box at Irvine's drug store, and in a few days she was greatly improved. She is now much stronger and better and recommends Doan's Kidney Pills as the remedy that cured her. They did her worlds of good and I can recommend them very highly."

To Clean Chamois

That useful friend of the housekeeper, the chamois, has an amazing habit of stiffening after a bath unless it is given with great care. Wash a chamois in soft water to which has been added a little borax and enough soap to form a lather. Shake up and down in the water and rub very gently. Rinse in cold water, shake in the air to get out as much of it as possible, pull it out well and lay it flat until partly dry. Now pull it through the hands several times and again spread out flat for further drying. Repeat this process several times and there will be little danger of a chamois ruined by drying hard and stiff.—Atlanta Journal.

RELIEVES IN FIVE MINUTES

Help Comes Quickly When Hyomei is Used for Catarrh.

The quick relief that comes from the Hyomei treatment for catarrh is most remarkable. Put a few drops of liquid Hyomei in the little pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, and before you have used the treatment for five minutes you will notice relief from your catarrhal troubles.

It gives a tonic healing effect to the air you breathe, kills all catarrhal germs, stops the poisonous secretions, and soothes the irritated mucous membrane.

Hyomei will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and make a quick and permanent cure of catarrh. So strong is F. W. Jordan's belief in the power of Hyomei to cure all catarrhal troubles that with every $1.00 outfit he gives a guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy gives satisfaction. May 8-2t.

REMINISCENCES

"Happy Bill" Recalls Boyhood Days—
"The Flicker's Nest."

Bedford is the county seat of Bedford county. 'Tis a most beautiful and healthy town, as is attested each year by the number of persons who flock here to spend their vacation or to visit and renew old acquaintances and be happy here. The court house pavement, I am told, is ten hundred and sixty feet above sea level. If Somerset, the next county seat on the west, can afford paved streets, why can't Bedford which has so many advantages that the neighbor does not have? Let us pave Pitt street from Cromwell's on the east to the bridge in the west end; it can be done and on a ten years' payment scale.

Many years ago Valentine Steckman kept hotel in Bedford and he was the most fearless landlord I ever knew. Many of the older men of town will remember how he would look at them and say, when asked for a second drink, "Had you not better take this money home to your family?" I once heard the boys say that when they would start at Time's and never go back there again that evening as he asked too many questions. I remember a number of years ago, about the time Simon Ling was married, a few things, and one of them was a severe whipping my father gave me. Father was sitting on the front steps of the house we lived in, next to Dr. Scott's drug store or about where C. D. Brode's store is today, and his boy, the writer, a wee shaver at that time, was there with him. Presently two men came walking up street and I thought now, when those men get up here I'll run out in front of them and throw them down. I ran out, but instead of throwing them down they pushed me down and I began to cry. Oh! how well I remember the time, for father took the boy by the arm and back onto the back porch where he found a piece of rope with which he lashed the back and legs of that boy.

About that time they were digging a ditch down Juliana street to bring water from "Gravel Hill" where there was a reservoir, afterwards known as the little reservoir; hydrants were few and far between in those days. At that time we boys had lots of fun that the boys of the present age don't have; riding horses to the creek to water was one of our pleasures. No railroad in Bedford county in those days and the farmers from every nook and corner of the county would come to court, almost always in a rockaway carriage or on horseback. If he came in carriage, a big figure would be chalked on the blind of his bridle and the same figure on the back curtain of the carriage, by so doing insuring the right harness to at least go with the right carriage. All horses had to be taken to the creek to water and it was the pleasure of a gang of us boys to ride the horses to water. Oh! what fun we used to have.

In those days we had a "flicker's nest," the rendezvous of a certain set of musicians; there was Nat McMullin and Mart Milburn, as fiddlers, Wayne Mower with the tenor drum, and Josh Mower with the bass drum, and let me tell you this quartet of musicians needed no notes but could get more music out of said instruments than any set of men I have ever run across.

The boys used to go swimming and of course we had been told before going not to stay long. We would remember this and come out of the water and begin to dress, when Mose Lippel or some other boy would come out with a handful of mud and throw it all over those then dressing; this meant go in and wash it off and now what do you suppose they would do while we were in washing the mud off of our persons? Why, nothing more or less than tie knots in our shirt sleeves and coat sleeves. Oh! I have called Mose bad names many a time for his meanness to me. This would be one hour, and the next we would all be together as loving as a lot of bees about a 'lasses barrel. Then there were Lou Saupp, Joe and Dave Kiser, who would get us small boys to steal boxes, presumably for a big bonfire on some festive occasion but, confound them, they would always take our boxes and have a big time on our labors.

A little later I went to school in the basement of the Presbyterian church, when to say "Vocal, vinegar and venison make very good victuals I vow," and not give v the sound of w, was considered the proper thing. Ask Mose about the terrible thrashing Rev. Archibald gave him in school where the Corle house now is, all because he would not tell on Brint Lyon, who killed the Reverend's big black cat. Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

CHAPTER TEN

THE first and second dressing gowns had sounded at Schloss Lyndalberg on the evening of the day after Egon von Breitstein's visit to his brother, and the grand duchess was beginning to wonder uneasily what kept her daughter when ringed fingers tapped on the panel of the door.

"Come in!" she answered, and Virginia appeared, still in the white tennis dress she had worn that afternoon. She stood for an instant without speaking, her face so radiantly beautiful that her mother thought it seemed illumined from a light within.

It had been on the lips of the grand duchess to scold the girl for her tardiness, since to be late was an unpardonable offense with an imperial majesty in the house. But in that radiance the words died.

"Virginia, what is it? You look— I scarcely know how you look. But you make me feel that something has happened."

The princess came slowly across the room, smiling softly, with an air of one who walks in sleep. Hardly conscious of what she did, she sank down in a big chair and sat resting her elbows on her knees, her chin nestling between her two palms, like a pink white rose in its calyx.

"You may go, Ernestine," said the grand duchess to her maid. "I'll ring when I want you again."

The elaborate process of waving and dressing her still abundant hair had fortunately come to a successful end, and Ernestine had just caused a diamond star to rise above her forehead. She was in a robe de chambre, and the rest of her toilet could wait till curiosity was satisfied.

But Virginia still sat dreaming, her happy eyes far away. The grand duchess had to speak twice before the girl heard and started a little. "My daughter, have you anything to tell me?"

The princess roused herself. "Nothing, mother, really, except that I'm the happiest girl on earth."

"Why, what has he said?"

"Not one word that any one mightn't have listened to. But I know. He does care. And I think he will say something before we part."

"There's only one more day of his visit here after tonight."

"One whole long, beautiful day to gether."

"But, after all, dearest," argued her mother, "what do you expect? If in truth you were only Miss Mowbray, marriage between you and the emperor would be out of the question. You've never gone into the subject of your feelings about this quite thoroughly with me, and I do wish I knew precisely what you hope for from him, what you will consider the key-stone of the situation."

"Only for him to say that he loves me," Virginia confessed. "If I'm right, if I've brought something new into his life, something which has shown him that his heart's as important as his head, then there will come a moment when he can keep silence no longer, when he'll be forced to say, 'I love you, dear, and because we can't belong to each other day is turned into night for me.' Then when that moment comes the tide of my fortune will be at its flood. I shall tell him that I love him, too, and I shall tell him all the truth."

"You'll tell him who we really are?"

"Yes, and why I've been masquerading—that it was because, ever since I was a little girl, he'd been the one man in the world for me; because, when our marriage was suggested through official channels, I made up my mind that I must win him first through love or live single all my days."

"What if he should be vexed at the deception and refuse to forgive you? You know, darling, we shall be in a rather curious position when everything comes out, as we have made all our friends here under the name of Mowbray. Of course the excuse for what we did is that our real position is a hundred times higher than the one we assumed, and all those to whom we've been introduced would be delighted to know us in our own characters at the end. But Leopold is a man, not a romantic girl, as you are. He has always had a reputation for pride and austerity, for being just before he would let himself be generous, and it may be that to one of his nature a little whim like yours—"

"You think of him as he was before we met, not as he is now, if you fancy he could be hard with a woman he really loved," said Virginia eagerly.

"He'll forgive me, dear. I've no fear of him any more. Tonight I've no fear of anything. He loves me—and I'm empress of the world."

"Many women would be satisfied with Rhaetia," was the practical response which jumped into the mind of the grand duchess, but she would throw no more cold water upon the rose flame of her daughter's exaltation. She kissed the girl on the forehead, breathing a few words of motherly sympathy, but when the princess had flown off to her own room to dress she shook her diamond starred head doubtfully.

Virginia's plan sounded poetical and as easy to carry out as to turn a kaleidoscope and form a charming new combination of color, or so it had seemed while the young voice pleaded, but when the happy face and radiant eyes no longer illumined the path the way ahead seemed dark.

To be sure, the princess had so far walked triumphantly along the high-road to success, but it was not always a good beginning which led to a good end, and the grand duchess felt as she rang for Ernestine that her nerves would be strained to the breaking point until matters were definitely settled for better or for worse.

Virginia had never been lovelier than she was that night, at dinner, and Egon von Breitstein's admiration for her beauty had in it a fascinating new ingredient. Until yesterday he had said to himself, "If she be not fair to me, what care I how fair she be?" But now there was a vague idea that she might, after all, be for him, and he took enormous pleasure in the thought that he was falling in love with a girl who had captured the emperor's heart.

Egon glanced very often at Leopold, contrasting his sovereign's appearance unfavorably with his own. The emperor was thin and dark, with a grave cast of feature, while Egon's face kept the color and youthfulness of the early twenties. He was older than Leopold, but he looked a boy. Alma-Tadema would have wreathed him with vine leaves, draped him with tiger skins and set him down on a marble bench against a burning sapphire sky, where he would have appeared more suitably clad than in the stiff blue and silver uniform of a crack Rhaetian regiment.

Leopold, on the contrary, would never be painted except as a soldier, and it seemed to Egon that no normal girl could help thinking him a far handsomer fellow than the emperor. For the moment, of course, Miss Mowbray did not notice him because his imperial majesty loomed large in the foreground of her imagination, but the chancellor had evidently a plan in his head for removing that stateful obstacle into the dim perspective.

Egon had not heard Miss Mowbray spoken of as an heiress. Therefore, even had there been no emperor in the way, he would not have worshipped at the shrine. But now behold the shrine, attractive before, newly and alluringly decked! Egon wondered much over his half brother's apparently impulsive offer and the contradictory command, which had a little later enjoined waiting.

He was delighted, however, that he had not been forbidden to make himself agreeable, and his idea was as soon as dinner should be over to find a place at Miss Mowbray's side before any other man should have time to take it. But, unluckily for this plan, Baron von Lyndal detained him for a few moments with praise of a new remedy which might cure the chancellor's gout, and when he escaped from his host to look for Miss Mowbray in the white drawing room she was not there.

From the music room adjoining, however, came sounds which drew him toward the door. He knew Miss Mowbray's soft, coaxing touch on the piano. She was there "playing in a whisper," as he had heard her call it. Perhaps she was going to sing, as she had done once or twice before, and would need some one to turn the pages of her music. Egon thought that he would much like to be the some one and was in the act of parting the white velvet portieres that covered the doorway when his hostess smilingly beckoned him away.

"The emperor has just asked Miss Mowbray to teach him some old fashioned Scotch or English air (I'm afraid I don't quite know the difference) called 'Annie Laurie,'" the baroness explained. "He was charmed with it when she sang the other evening, and I've been assuring him that the song would exactly suit his voice. We mustn't disturb them while the lesson is going on. Tell me—I've hardly had a moment to ask you—how did you find the chancellor?"

Chained to a forced allegiance, Egon mechanically answered the questions of the baroness without making absurd mistakes, the while his ears burned to hear what was going on behind the white curtains.

Everybody knew of the music lesson now and chatted in tones of tactful monotony, never speaking too loudly to disturb the singers, never too cautiously, lest they should seem to listen. Once, and then again, the creamy mezzo soprano and the rich tenor that was almost a baritone sang conscientiously through the verses of "Annie Laurie" from beginning to end. Then a few desultory chords were struck on the piano, and at last there was silence behind the white curtains in the music room.

Were the two still there? To interrupt such a tete-a-tete seemed out of the question, but not to know what was happening Egon found too hard to bear, and the arrival of a telegram for Lady Mowbray came as opportunely as if Providence had had his special needs in mind.

Evidently it was not a pleasant telegram, for as she read it the Dresden china lady showed plainly that she was disconcerted. Her pretty face lost its color; her eyes dilated as if she had tasted a drop of belladonna on sugar; she patted her lips with her lace handkerchief and finally rose from her chair, looking dazed and distressed.

"I've had rather bad news," she admitted to Baroness von Lyndal, who was all solicitude—"oh, nothing really serious, I trust, but still disquieting. It is from a dear friend. I think I had better go to my room and talk things over with Helen. Would you be kind enough to tell her when she comes in that she's to follow me there? Don't send for her till then; it's not necessary. But I shall want her by and by."

It was clear that Lady Mowbray did not wish her daughter to be disturbed. Still, Egon von Breitstein thought he might fairly let his anxiety run away with him. As the baroness accompanied her guest to the door he took it upon himself to search for Miss Mowbray, for now if the emperor should curse him for a spoilsport he would have the best of excuses. Lady Mowbray was in need of her daughter.

He lifted the white curtains and peeped through a small antechamber into the music room beyond. It was empty, but one of the long windows leading into the rose garden was wide open.

The month of September was dying, and away in the Rhaetian mountains winter had begun. Yet in the lap of the low country summer lingered. The air was soft and sweet with the perfume of roses—roses living and roses dead in a potpourri of scattered petals on the grass. It was a garden for lovers and a night for lovers.

Egon went to the open window and looked out, but dared not let his feet take the direction of his eyes, though he was sure that somewhere in the garden Miss Mowbray and the emperor were to be found.

"They will come in again this way," he said to himself, "for they will want people to think they have never left the music room, and for that very reason they won't stop too long. They must have some regard for the conventions. If I wait!"

He did not finish the sentence in his mind. Nevertheless he examined the resources of the window niche with a critical eye.

There was a deep inclosure between the window frame and the long, straight curtains of olive green satin which matched the decoration of the music room. By drawing the curtains a few inches farther forward one could make a screen which would hide one from observation by any person in the room or outside in the garden. So Egon did draw the curtain, and, framed in his shelter like a saint in a niche, he stood peering into the silver night.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It is almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound. If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

The moon was rising over the lake, and long, pale rays of level light were stealing up the paths like the fingers of a blind child that caress gropingly the features of a beloved face.

Egon could not see the whole garden or all the paths among the roses. But if the emperor and his companion came back by the way they had gone he would know presently whether they walked in the attitude of friends or lovers. It was so necessary for his plans to know this that he thought it worth while to exercise a little patience in waiting. Of course, if they were lovers, goodbye to his hopes, and he would never have so good a chance as this to make sure.

All things in the garden that were not white were gray as a dove's wings. Even the shadows were not black, and the sky was gray, with the soft gray of velvet under a crust of diamonds which flashed as the spangles on a woman's fan flash when it trembles in her hand.

White moths, happily ignorant that summer would come no more for them, drifted out from the shadows like rose petals blown by the soft wind. On a trellis a crowding sisterhood of pale roses drooped their heads downward in memento mori. It was a silver night, a night of enchantment.

Leopold had meant to take Virginia out only to see the moon rise over the water, turning the great smooth sheet of jet into a silver shield, for there had been clouds or spurts of rain on other nights, and he had said to himself that never again perhaps would they two stand together under the white spell of the moon. He had meant to keep her for five minutes, or ten at the most, and then to bring her back, but they had walked down to the path which girdled the cliff above the lake. The moon touched her golden hair and her pure face like a benediction. He dared not look at her thus for long, and when there came a sudden quick rustling in the grass at their feet he bent down, glad of any change in the current of his thoughts.

Some tiny winged thing of the night sought a lodging in a bell shaped flower whose blue color the moon had drunk, and as Leopold stooped the same impulse made Virginia bend.

He stretched out his hand to gather the low growing branch of blossoms, which he would give the girl as a souvenir of this hour, and their fingers met. Lake and garden swam before the eyes of the princess as the emperor's hand closed over hers.

Her great moment had come, yet now that it was here, womanlike, she wished it away, not gone forever—oh, no—but waiting just round the corner of the future.

"The flowers are yours—I give them to you," she laughed, as if she fancied it was in eagerness to grasp the disputed spray that he had pressed her fingers.

"You are the one flower I want—flower of all the world," he answered in a choked voice, speaking words he had not meant to speak. But the ice barriers that held back the torrent of which he had told her had melted long ago and now had been swept away. Other barriers which he had built up in their place—his convictions, his duty as a man at the head of a nation—were gone too. "I love you," he stammered. "I love you far better than my life, which you saved. I've loved you ever since our first hour together on the mountain, but every day my love has grown a thousandfold until now it's greater and higher than any mountain. I can fight against myself no longer. I thought I was strong, but this love is stronger than I am. Say that you care for me—only say that!"

"Do care," Virginia whispered. She had prayed for this, lived for this, and she was drowning in happiness. Yet she had pictured a different scene, a scene of storm and stress. She had heard in fancy broken words of sorrow and noble renunciation on his lips, and in anticipating his suffering she had felt the joy her revelation would give. "I care—so much, so much! How hard it will be to part!"

"If you care, then, we shall not be parted," said Leopold.

The princess looked up at him in wonder, holding back as he would have caught her in his arms. What could he mean? What plan was in his mind that, believing her to be Helen Mowbray, yet made it possible for him to reassure her so?

"I don't understand," she faltered. "You are the emperor, and I am no more than!"

"You are my wife if you love me."

In the shock of her ecstatic surprise she was helpless to resist him longer and he held her close and passionately, his lips on her hair, her face crushed against his heart. She could hear it beating, feel it throb under her cheek. His wife? Then he loved her enough for that. Yet how was it possible for him to stand ready for her sake to override the laws of his own land?

"My darling—my wife!" he said again. "To think that you love me!"

"I have loved you from the first," the princess confessed, "but I was afraid you would feel, even if you cared, that we must say goodbye. Now— And in an instant the whole truth would have been out, but the word 'goodbye' stabbed him, and he could not let it pass.

When you think of Indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely digests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Rheumatic Pains Conquered by
First Dose of Uric-O.

A Trial Free to All Who Never Used It.

Mr. Frank Howe, a prominent farmer of Baldwinville, N. Y., says: "I visited the best physician in this county, who treated me for about two years for rheumatism. I spent in that time several hundred dollars and seemed to grow worse instead of better each day. Being on crutches and forced to drive to the train and hobbling to the doctor's office became very discouraging, let alone the sleepless nights and fearful hours of pain. Being advised by a friend I purchased Smith's Uric-O prescription, took it home and used it that day as directed.

Those fearful sciatic pains left me, my blood seemed to let loose and flow freely, I felt different and knew the next morning I had found a cure, as I slept and rested well all that night, something I had not done before in two years. I used in all six bottles of Uric-O and have never felt a return of the disease, had no use for crutches or cane since the first day's treatment."

"I have since recommended Uric-O to hundreds of friends and acquaintances and in every instance it gave remarkable relief."

Anyone who doubts Mr. Howe's experience is invited to write him for further details.

The manufacturers have so much confidence in the remedy that they will gladly give a large 75c bottle of Uric-O free to all Rheumatics who have never used it and are looking for a permanent, lasting cure for this most distressing disease. Address for free trial, Smith Drug Co., 481 Smith Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

Uric-O is sold and personally recommended in Bedford by F. W. Jordan. May 8-2t.

May Burr-McIntosh

The cover of this charming magazine, now on the news stands, is in full colors by the celebrated French artist E. Vernon; there are also very beautiful portraits of Mabel Taliaferro and Florence Reed in colors. An interesting article on Alaska, with some very unusual photographs, is a feature of the number, while the reproductions of paintings from the Spring Exhibition at the National Academy of Design will appeal to art lovers. Perriton Maxwell, the well-known art critic, writes very interestingly of these pictures.

Those who are interested in photography will appreciate the article on "The Limitations of the Film Camera" by Charles Quincy Turner. In the departments of People of Note and The Season's Notable Plays many fine photographic reproductions are shown. Arnold Kruckman continues his fine articles on Music and Musicians. This May number is one of the best of recent issues of this unique magazine. Burr Publishing Company, New York.

If all those who believe or doubt a little more or less than the Reynolds' standard are "mangy curs" and "chattering idiots." $82 more than half the voters of the county belonged to that class in 1904, and the election this fall will show the number to have increased very decidedly.

A CONTRAST

If that man who exists only in the brain of Mr. Reynolds, who terms Bedford a "hell resort," should read last week's Inquirer, at the completion of the reading of the article on "That Blake Vote" he would picture our Congressman with his coat collar turned up, pale from the stinging rebuke, and pleading for sympathy and warmth.

On reading "A Word to the Knockers" he would see in his mental vision not the semblance of an icicle but a raging, rampant, political acrobat, his coat and vest lying in a corner, his hair disheveled, his collar and shirt open at the front, his sleeves rolled up, his eyes glaring, his suspenders loosed—here decency requires the drawing of the curtain.

REYNOLDS RAMPANT

The lengthy editorial in last week's Bedford organ of Congressman Reynolds, devoted to explaining "That Blake Vote," clearly reveals how keenly the Honorable gentleman feels the stinging rebuke administered by the Republicans of the district and this county in particular. Mr. Reynolds begins the article with reference to a statement in the Johnstown Tribune to the effect that in Johnstown some Democrats voted for Blake. He states that "This was the condition of things all over the state."

Because there are speakers in Alaska is no evidence that the breezes over the African deserts are chilly. We are not in position to discuss what may have been done by some naughty Democrats in Cambria county but we do know that the returns reveal nothing of the kind in this county. It requires no "sitting up nights" to analyze the official vote of Bedford county, as published in Mr. Reynolds' organ, the Bedford Inquirer. The Pennsylvania Blacksmith had, in this county, $85 votes out of a total of 3,548, or one vote out of four—and this without being backed by either an organization or a horde of office-holders, and without having any seeds to distribute at the expense of the government!

It is worthy of note, also, that nearly a hundred less Republicans voted for Blake and Reynolds than voted for the candidates for County Treasurer. These are the cold facts that are disturbing the mind of the man who lost his home ward, his home town and his home county in 1904 and received nearly the same rebuke in 1906. His lengthy effort to beloud the facts of the recent primary with regard to the Blake vote will not avail. It is the voice of the Republicans of the county, crying out from every district in the county (except Southampton No. 1 where but two Republican votes were cast) and he has heard the clarion notes and he is distressed and humiliated.

GRABBING AT STRAWS

The writer of the editorial in the Inquirer of last week on "A Word to the Knockers" sets up an imaginary visitor to this county, who, about a year ago, after "sitting around the hotels," read some local papers, among them The Gazette, and, on returning to Philadelphia declared this a "hell resort."

Now it is a fact that there was no campaign in progress last fall hence the whole thing is absurd. If he could see the article in question in our esteemed contemporary of last week he could certainly form his conclusions as to our Congressman, after mature deliberation and when perfectly sober—and not "after sitting around the hotels."

Mr. Reynolds has set up men of straw before, but we have not before known of his going to an asylum for an illustration; however, if he prefers to paint such pictures we have no objection to offer—it is always wise for one to draw his illustrations from scenes familiar, whether real or psychical. Even "mangy curs," to use the words of Mr. Reynolds, "who know nothing of the world or the men in it" are infinitely superior to a man who breaks alike "political promises and personal pledges" though he may be depicted as "pure as curdled snow."

Does the gentleman see in the Blake vote the shadow of a coming event? Does he at last realize how the people of his home county regard him? Is this the cause of his throwing ugly characteristic epithets at the papers that gave the public the truth about the Blake vote? Have his henchmen failed to gather the first harvest from his seeds? Or did the followers of Senator Miller show up so strongly as to trouble his dreams? He has ruled in several parties with an iron hand, but his end is near. His effort to obscure his shame and his disgrace, which he too keenly feels at last, will not check the chill November blast.

Batzel-Evans

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at 6 p. m. on Wednesday, May 6, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Evans at Stonerstown when their daughter, Miss Bertha E., was married to Edward F. Batzel of Yellow Creek. The ceremony was performed by Rev. McGuire and witnessed by a number of guests, after which a supper was served. They will reside at Stonerstown.

Rorabaugh-Hillegass

At the Lutheran parsonage, Schellsburg, by Rev. H. W. Bender, Tuesday noon, May 5, Ralph H. Rorabaugh of Conemaugh and Miss Cora S. Hillegass of near New Buena Vista were united in marriage. They were accompanied by Earl Hillegass and Miss Louisa Zimmerman, both of Johnstown, who served as best man and bridesmaid.

Aged Couple Surprised

Despite the inclement weather of last Thursday evening the children and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Troutman gathered at their home in Bedford township, the occasion being the 71st birthday of Mr. Troutman. The arrival of George Troutman of Chicago completed the surprise, as it was not generally known that he was coming. The presents were beautiful and useful, among others a set of china cups and saucers and a shaving set.

After an elaborate supper all repaired to their homes having had a delightful time. Those present were: G. J. Troutman, S. U. Troutman and wife, A. E. Smith and wife, J. C. Roberts and wife, Samuel Jakes, Mrs. Anna Walter, Mrs. Mary Miller, Mrs. Smith Tomlinson, Misses Mame Walter, Estelle Tomlinson, Florence, Hazel and Grace Troutman, Irene Miller, Clara Smith and Catherine Roberts; Silas Hinton, Raymond Crisman, Russell Miller, Sewell Jakes, Norman, Austin and Roscoe Smith, and Lamont Roberts.

A CONVENTION PRIMER

Important Information Concerning Past and Coming National Political Conventions.

FIRST NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

Were candidates for president and vice president always nominated at national conventions?

No. Previous to 1830 they were nominated largely by congressional caucuses or by state legislatures.

When and where were the first national conventions held?

At Philadelphia in September, 1830, the so called Anti-Masonic party held the first political national convention more than two years before the presidential election; but, instead of making nominations, it adjourned to meet in Baltimore Sept. 26, 1831, when William Wirt was nominated for president and Amos Ellmaker for vice president. The National Republicans met in national convention at Baltimore Dec. 12, 1831, and nominated Henry Clay for president and John Sergeant for vice president. The Democrats first met in national convention at Baltimore May 21, 1832, where Van Buren was nominated for vice president. Jackson was so unanimously accepted as the candidate for re-election that only a resolution was passed declaring that the convention "cordially concurred in the repeated nominations that General Jackson had received in various parts of the country for re-election as president."

Was any platform adopted at these conventions?

No. Following the conventions of the Anti-Masonic party and the National Republicans an address to the people was issued by each. The Democrats issued no address, but a resolution was passed declaring that "in place of a general address from this body" the delegations should address their respective constituents on the political issues of the day.

COUNTY S. S. CONVENTION

To be Held at Woodbury Thursday and Friday, May 14 and 15.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Bedford County Sunday School Association will be held in the Lutheran church at Woodbury on Thursday and Friday, May 14 and 15. A very good program has been arranged for this occasion, in which State Secretary W. G. Landis of Philadelphia, Miss Clara Louise Ewalt of New York and Prof. William Beery of Huntington will take part; other numbers of the program have been assigned, with special care, to home talent best suited to the various branches of Sunday school work.

Each school in the county is entitled to send two delegates besides the pastor and superintendent to the convention, and the officers and convention workers, as well as the good citizens of Woodbury, desire to see a large turnout. Every school in the county should be represented at this series of meetings and all persons expecting to attend should at once notify Charles B. Hetrick of Woodbury, Chairman of Entertainment Committee.

May 4—About four inches of snow fell here this morning but by noon very little of it remained.

A few days ago Clarence Claycomb, aged eight, fell from the barn loft to the floor below receiving an ugly scalp wound which required some three or four stitches to hold together, but at the present he is much improved.

Stanley Hillegass, the 18-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hillegass, is very low with pneumonia. Dr. Brant is the attending physician.

The S. S. Convention at this place on April 23 was well attended and a good, enjoyable and profitable time was spent, especially by those interested in Sunday school work. It is a lamentable fact that many persons who manifest a great interest on such occasions never darken the door of a Sabbath school, much less take an active part therein.

Our congratulations are due to Prof. Barkman, our newly-elected County Superintendent, and we hope the choice may prove a wise one.

Two of our estimable young people, Loring Carpenter and Miss Ada Barkley, recently united hands and hearts in matrimony and started on an overland trip by way of Ohio, Kansas and Colorado, to California, where they expect to make their future home. May much happiness in their far-away home be theirs.

Our bark peelers are experiencing such a cold snap that the flow of the life element of the tree is much retarded and the removal of its outer coating somewhat difficult.

The fruit, as yet, has not been much damaged but the outlook at present is not at all promising.

May 5—The worst blizzard and high wind ever known by our aged people swept over our land Thursday evening, blowing at the rate of 46 1/2 miles an hour; the indicators were put out of business, the wind uprooting orchards, tearing off roofs and hammering down fences and making the highways at certain places impassible.

J. H. Ellenberger, better known to the readers of The Gazette as "Barney," is seriously ill at his home near Hellville with inflammation of the bowels.

BEDFORD COUNTY DISPENSARY

Good Work of the Institution—Free Treatment and Advice to Poor.

The State Department of Health's Bedford County Dispensary for Tuberculosis, which was opened April 14 1908, at Everett, will play an important part in stamping out consumption in our district.

This Dispensary, which is open Tuesdays and Fridays at his office from 1 to 2 p. m., is in charge of Dr. Walter de la M. Hill who is the State Department of Health's efficient Medical Inspector for this county. Dr. Hill has been tireless in his work to get the Dispensary under way.

Free medical treatment and advice are furnished to the victims of tuberculosis among the poor of Bedford county. Where necessary, indigent patients are supplied with fresh eggs and milk daily. The officials, however, will guard themselves against being imposed upon to furnish provisions to other members of the family. Patients are also supplied with paper sputum cups and tissue paper napkins.

The opening of the Bedford County Dispensary is in line with the work that State Health Commissioner Dixon is doing throughout the entire state, over forty such dispensaries having already been opened in as many counties. There are many victims of tuberculosis who are not able to go to the State Sanatoria, in many cases because they are the wage earners of their families, and these people must be taken care of. They especially need instruction as to the precautions they must take in their homes and in the work shop so that they may not spread the disease. To give such instruction, follow it up, and see that the precautionary measures are carried out is the great object of the dispensary work. For this reason it will be a mighty factor in stamping out tuberculosis in this county.

Patients visiting the dispensary are carefully examined by the physicians in charge of the clinic. Such medicine as is needed is given, but the principle reliance will be upon drilling into every tuberculosis sufferer the necessity of plenty of fresh air, proper diet, and careful regulation of habits of life; every patient is urged, of course, to sleep with windows wide open—in a hammock swung out of doors, if possible. The wage earner who is obliged to spend a number of hours each day indoors is made to understand that if it is impossible for him to change his occupation, life can only be spared by spending all his leisure hours in the open air. Plenty of rest is also necessary for his recovery and so those in charge of the dispensary are helping the patients solve the problem of how to continue to earn his daily wages and yet secure the necessary amount of rest and fresh air.

The question of diet is receiving special attention. It is easy to tell a tuberculosis patient to eat plenty of fresh eggs and drink a large amount of pure milk, but to get the patient to do this is another thing, as few of them will consume sufficient eggs without constant urging. Usually consumptives are too warmly clad—heavy flannel underwear supplemented by thick chest pads is very often worn, even in warm summer weather. The evil effects of this continual over-clothing are so often apparent that great care must be taken to give proper advice, clothing should conform to the weather. All this is covered in the advice given to those patients who visit the dispensary.

As soon as the number of patients visiting in a trained nurse will be reported on the Dispensary staff to visit the home of every tuberculosis patient who registers at the Dispensary. Inside the home the visiting nurse will find out what seem to be the trifling precautions that are unheeded but the non-observance of which is the principle cause of the spread of the infection. Is the tooth brush used by the patient kept by the side of the others in that home? Is a common towel used? Does the consumptive use the same bed with any other person? Is there any disinfection of clothing, bedding, eating utensils and of all other articles used by the patient? All these things will be carefully investigated by the visiting nurse, who will also ascertain if the patient is using the sputum cups and paper napkins given out at the dispensary. The whole life of the household will be carefully studied by the nurse and every member will receive thorough instruction as to what is necessary to prevent them from being infected by the consumptive patient. In many cases the nurse will find a brother or a sister in whom tuberculosis is suspected. This member of the family will be urged to come to the dispensary for examination, and many a case will thus be found and placed under treatment at a time that will insure recovery if proper care is taken.

Every effort is being made to have the work at the dispensary known throughout the entire county of Bedford so that as many as possible may take advantage of it.

It is a pity to see a person neglect indications of kidney or bladder trouble that may result in Bright's disease when Foley's Kidney Remedy will correct irregularities and strengthen these organs. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy at the first sign of danger. Ed. D. Heckerman.

If You Have Lost Your Grip
Most of the people whom I have met who are down in the world, or talented people who are doing mediocre work, have lost their grip. And what does that mean?

It means that they have lost confidence in themselves. No man loses his grip until he loses faith in himself.

The grip and confidence of most people follow their moods. If their courage is up, if they feel well, their grip is firmer; but the moment they get a little discouraged, or have a fit of the "blues," they lose their grip, and are soon way down.

Now, the well-trained man pays very little attention to his moods, except to show them that he intends to be master, that he does not propose to throw away a good day's work just because he does not happen to be in the right mood. When he goes to his office or store in the morning, he goes there determined to do a solid day's work, to give his best; and the result is that, after a while, moods have very little to do with him. After he has conquered them a few times, and shown himself master of his mental conditions, his mind falls into line with his resolution.

People who are victims of their moods never amount to much, because they are never masters of themselves. They never know when they start out in the morning whether not. If they "feel like it," they will; if they do not, both the quantity and quality of their work will be lowered. —Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine for May.

Non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla

If you think you need a tonic, ask your doctor. If you think you need something for your blood, ask your doctor. If you think you would like to try Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor. Consult him often. Keep in close touch with him.

Ask your doctor to name some of the results of constipation. His long list will begin with sick-headache, biliousness, dyspepsia, thin blood, bad skin. Then ask him if he would recommend your using Ayer's Pills.

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Fit of the Neck
The fit of the neck of a blouse is one of the most important things about the blouse. If it is wrong it will make the whole garment look ill-fitted. Make the neck of the blouse just a trifle smaller than the base of the collar band. If a few notches are cut in the neck before the collar band is put on it will avoid wrinkles.

It Reached the Spot
Mr. E. Humphrey, who owns a large general store at Omega, O., and is president of the Adams County Telephone Co., as well as the Home Telephone Co., of Pike County, O., says of Dr. King's New Discovery: "It saved my life once. At least I think it did. It seemed to reach the spot—the very seat of my cough—when everything else failed." Dr. King's New Discovery not only reaches the cough spot; it heals the sore spots and the weak spots in throat, lungs and chest. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores. 50c and $1.00. ## THE STRIKE OF 1877

Captain A. E. Schell Recalls Incidents of Stirring Time.

CAPT. SAMUEL F. STATLER

Made Famous Run—Two Bedford County Companies—Heavy Loss in Railroad Property.

In consequence of a reduction of 10 per cent. in wages the memorable strike by organized labor was called in 1877. It involved engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen and many others and extended over the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Erie, Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago and many other roads.

To suppress the strike troops were called out in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio and West Virginia. In Baltimore serious trouble occurred in which several were killed and a number wounded in a conflict between the troops and the strikers. In Pittsburgh the property loss was very great, $12,000,000 going up in flames. In Chicago the Federal troops were obliged to use artillery to suppress the rioters and protect the city from vandalism.

The condition on the Pennsylvania road between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh was deplorable and Altoona was the storm centre of the divisions. Altoona, with her gigantic workshops and industries trembled with alarm, and among the companies of the National Guards dispatched to the scene were two from this county, one from Bedford and the other from Schellsburg, the former under Capt. S. F. Statler and the latter under Capt. W. W. Van Ormer, both of whom carried swords in defence of the Union during the Civil War and went through many hotly-contested engagements, receiving scars that they will carry until the last roll-call relieves them from duty.

A train was boarded at Bedford for Altoona, but east of Everett the railroad was obstructed and the troops were obliged to return to Bedford and march overland from Cessna Station. They were assigned duty in the city and were soon compelled to put an end to the jeers and insults of the ill-disposed rioters. The officers gave them to understand that any demonstration would be resented in strict obedience to orders. While the troops were friendly and kindly disposed toward the strikers they had an imperative duty to perform which they meant to do.

The great artery of commerce between Altoona and Pittsburgh was blocked and in the hands of strikers, blind with vengeance. In the midst of it all President Tom Scott was perplexed, and in desperation, looked around for a man who had nerve enough to breast the storm and face death in many forms along the route to run an engine through to Pittsburgh, open the road and carry a message to the President of the Pittsburgh division.

In this dark moment a Bedford county soldier came to the front in the person of Capt. S. F. Statler who had done similar service in "Dixie." This invincible soldier and his aide volunteered to undertake the perilous task. With gun in hand they climbed onto the engine, opened the throttle, and the iron monster moved in its perilous westward course, leaving behind a dark trail of smoke. This bold act of the volunteer engineer and his aide was looked upon as chivalry unparalleled in the history of railroading in America.

They opened the way between the two cities and boldly entered Pittsburgh. When the train rushed past the station at Johnstown there was no demonstration for revenge and hate turned to admiration for the brave soldiers. A. E. Schell. Schellsburg, Pa., May 1, 1908.

What's In McClure's?
The May McClure's is a strong fiction number. "In the Dark Hour" is a stirring story of tropical love and adventure, by Percival Gibbon, author of "The Second-Class Passenger." Lucy Pratt's Ezekiel reappears in a delightful story, "In Charge of Trusty." "War on the Tiger" carries the reader through jungles, on the trail of the man-eating tiger. Other stories following more familiar paths are James Barnes' "The Silly Ass," "The Radical Judge," by Anita Fitch, "The Lie Direct," by Caroline Duer, and "The Misadventures of Cassidy," by Edward S. Moffatt.

George Kennan's "Poverty and Discontent in Russia" presents a clear and vivid picture of a situation on which hangs the fate of future generations. Carl Schurz' "First Days of the Reconstruction" is an absorbing narrative of a critical period in our own history. "The Life of Mrs. Ed- dy" by Georgine Milmine increases in interest as it nears the close. Ellen Terry's Autobiography holds its interest in "Olivia" and "Faust" at the Lyceum. Mrs. Cutting's serial novel is beautifully illustrated by Alice Barber Stephens. Blenden Campbell contributes the cover design and N. C. Wyeth the colored frontispiece. Other illustrators are Frederic Dorr Steele, Franklin Booth, and Eric Pape. Two notable bits of verse are "The Flower Factory," by Florence Wilkinson, and "The Heart Knoweth," by Charlotte Wilson.

The insistent cry of the children comes again to the ear in Florence Wilkinson's "Flower Factory" in the May McClure's.
Love Your Friends
Love your friends, and do not put them from you. Tell them of your love not once but often; and do not merely tell it, but prove your words to them and repeat the proof. Open your heart and love them kinglywise. Make merry for them, make them happy, give them brightness, make your home cheery for them! The lost opportunities we most regret were opportunities for loving.—The Better Way.

For Mending Kitchen Range
Common blue clay, softened with water, then mixed with coal ashes until of a consistency that will spread like mortar, applied with a trowel, filling in all broken places smoothly and evenly, then letting it dry over night, will make a firm, hard surface that will wear almost indefinitely with scarcely any cost.

The trouble with most cough cures is that they constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup does not constipate, but on the other hand its laxative principles gently move the bowels. It is pleasant to take and it is especially recommended for children, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

The Poultry Yard
Don't let the chickens feed with the hogs. Many a fine bird has been lost in this way.
Sunflower seed and millet are both good for chickens, especially during the moulting period.
The benefit derived from making one's flock better is far greater than the expense incurred.
Sickness among fowls is often caused by the absence of sufficient grit of grinding material.
Chickens seldom get sick without a local cause. Find out what it is and guard against it in the future.
In time of hatching, remember that good food, pure water and freedom from lice will insure fertile eggs.

Baby won't suffer five minutes with croup if you apply Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil at once. It acts like magic.

very spot where you and I stand now—heart to heart for the first time, my darling—asking myself whether there were any way out of labyrinth. It was not until I brought you here and saw you by my side, with the moon rays for a crown, that a flash of blinding light seemed to pierce the clouds. Suddenly I saw all things clearly, and though there will be difficulties, I count them as overcome.

"Still you haven't answered my question," said Virginia in a low, strained voice.
"I'm coming to that now. It was best that you should know first all that's been troubling my heart and brain during these few bitter-sweet days which have taught me so much. You know men who have their place at the head of great nations can't think first of themselves or even of those they love better than themselves. If they hope to snatch at personal happiness they must take the one way open to them and be thankful.

"Don't do me the horrible injustice to believe that I wouldn't be proud to show you to my subjects as their empress, but instead I can offer only what men of royal blood for hundreds of years have offered to women whom they honored as well as loved. You must have heard even in England of what is called a morganatic marriage. It is that I offer you."

With a cry of pain—the cruel pain of wounded, disappointed love—the princess tore her hand from his.
"Never!" she exclaimed. "It's an insult!"
"An insult? No, a thousand times no. I see that even now you don't understand."

"I think that I understand very well, too well," said Virginia brokenly. The beautiful fairy palace of happiness that she had watched as it grew lay shattered, destroyed, in the moment which ought to have seen its triumphant completion.

"I tell you that you cannot understand or you wouldn't say—my love—that I wouldn't dare to say, my love—that I insulted you. Don't you see, don't you know, that you would be my wife in the sight of all men as well as in the sight of God?"
"Your wife, you call it!" The princess gave a harsh little laugh which hurt as tears could not hurt. "You seem to have strange ideas of that word, which has always been sacred to me. A morganatic marriage! That is a mere pretense, a hypocrisy. I would be your wife, you say. I would give you all my love, all my life. You in return would give me—your left hand. And you know well that in a country which tolerates such a one-sided travesty of marriage the laws would hold you free to marry another woman—a royal woman, whom you could make an empress—as free as if I had no existence."

"Great heaven, that you should speak so!" he broke out. "What if the law did hold me free? Can you dream—do you put me so low as to dream—that my heart would hold me free? My soul would be bound to you forever."

"So you may believe now. But the knowledge that you could change would be death to me—a death to die daily. Yes, I tell you again, it was an insult to offer a lot so miserable, so contemptible, to a woman you profess to love. How could you do it? If only you had never spoken the hateful words—if only you had left me the ideal I had of you—noble, glorious, above the whole world of men! But, after all, you are selfish, cruel. If you had said, 'I love you, yet we must part, for duty stands between us,' I could— But, no; I can never tell you now what I could have answered if you had said that instead of breaking my heart."

Under the fire of her reproach he stood still, his lips tight, his shoulders braced, as if he held his breast open for the knife.
"By heaven, it is you who are cruel!" he said at last. "How can I make you see your injustice?"
"In no way. There's nothing more to be said between us two after this except goodby."

"It shall not be goodby."
"It must. I wish it."
He had caught her dress as she turned to go, but now he released her. "You wish it? It's not true that you love me, then?"
"It was true. Everything—everything in my whole life—is changed from this hour. It would be better if I'd never seen you. Goodby."

The function of the kidneys is to strain out the impurities of the blood which is constantly passing through them. ## The Princess Virginia (Continued From Third Page.)

"We shall not say goodbye, not for an hour," he cried. "After this I could not lose you. There's nothing to prevent my being your husband, you my wife. Would to God you were of royal blood and you should be my empress—the fairest empress that poet or historian ever saw—but we're prisoners of fate, you and I. We must take the goods the gods provide. My goddess you will always be, but the empress of Rhaetia even my love isn't powerful enough to make you. If I am to you only half what you are to me you'll be satisfied with the empire of my heart."

Suddenly the warm blood of Virginia's veins grew chill. It was as if a wind had blown up from the dark depths of the lake to strike like ice into her soul. An instant more and he would have known that she was a princess of the blood, and through his whole life she could have gone on worshipping him because he had been ready to break down all barriers for her love before he guessed there need be none to break. Now her warm impulse of gratitude was frozen by the biting blast of disillusionment, but still there was hope left. It might be that she misunderstood him. She would not judge him yet.

"The empire of your heart!" she echoed. "If that were mine I should be richer than with all the treasures of the earth. If you were Leo, the chamois hunter, I would love you as I love you now, because in yourself you are the one man for me, and I'd go with you to the end of the world as your wife. But you're not the chamois hunter: you are the main I love, yet you are the emperor. Being the emperor, had you talked of a hopeless love and a promise not to forget, having nothing else to give me because of your high destiny and my humbler one, I could still have been happy. Yet you speak of more than that. You speak of something I can't understand."

"Never!" she exclaimed.
It seems to me that what a royal man offers the woman he loves should be all or nothing.

"I do offer you all," said Leopold, "all myself, my life, the heart and soul of me—all that's my own to give. The rest—belongs to Rhaetia."
"Then what do you mean by—"
"Don't you understand, my sweet, that I've asked you to be my wife? What can a man ask more of a woman?"

"Your wife, but not the empress. How can the two be apart?"
He tried to take her once more in his arms, but when he saw that she would not have it so he held his love in check and waited. He was sure that he would not need to wait long, for not only had he laid his love at her feet, but had pledged himself to a tremendous sacrifice on love's altar.

The step which in a moment of passion he had now resolved to take would create dissension among his people, alienate one who had been his second father, rouse England, America and Germany to anger because of the princess whose name rumor had already coupled with his and raise in every direction a storm of disapproval. When this girl whom he loved realized the immensity of the concession he was making because of his reverent love for her she would give her life to him now and forever.

Tenderly he took her hand and lifted it to his lips. Then when she did not draw it away, because he was to have his chance of explanation, he held it between both his own as he talked on.
"Dearest one," he said, "when I first knew I loved you—loved you as I didn't dream I could love a woman—for your sake and my own, I would have avoided meeting you too often. This I tell you frankly. I didn't see how in honor such a love could end except in despair for me and sorrow even for you if you should come to care. Had you and Lady Mowbray stayed on at the hotel in Kronburg I think I could have held to my resolve. But when Baroness von Lyndal suggested your coming here my heart leaped up. I said in my mind: 'At least I shall have the joy of seeing her every day for a time without doing anything to darken her future. Afterward, when she has gone out of my life, I shall have that radiance to remember. And so no harm will be done in the end, except that I shall have to pay by suffering.' Still I had no thought of the future without a parting. I felt that inevitable. And the suffering came hand in hand with the joy, for not a night here at Lyndalberg have I slept. If I had been weak I should have groaned aloud in the agony of renunciation."

"My rooms open on a lawn. More than once I've come out into the darkness when all the household was sleeping. Sometimes I have walked to this

A TREAT FOR FANS North American's Baseball Edition, May 10.

Exceptional as were the special baseball editions that marked the opening of the baseball seasons of 1906 and 1907, the twelve-page supplement in colors, which will be a feature of The North American of Sunday, May 10, will eclipse them both.

Never before has there been such baseball activity as this year. In addition to the organizations of last year, the American, National, Atlantic, Tristate and Intercountry leagues, a host of new leagues are in the field, including the Union, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, North Penn, Main Line, Lebanon, Susquehanna, etc.

Followers of all of these clubs will find their interests well cared for in the big special edition. The batting and fielding figures of the American, National and Tristate for 1907 are given in full, a reference to settle future arguments.

The chase for the pennant, that trophy which is the most sought of all rewards for athletic effort, forms the subject of a first-page story and a striking illustration in colors.

George M. Graham, The North American's sporting editor, has an article on the managers of the tristate teams.

School news, a specialty of The North American, is taken care of with a full page. Colleges, especially those of Pennsylvania, are correspondingly taken care of.

The back page, in colors, is given up to two striking groups, profile studies of every member of the Phillies and Athletics, something that every fan will want to keep.

Throughout Pennsylvania there are hundreds of independent clubs, who draw big crowds and have the backing of the entire town. These are all cared for in this supplement.

Altogether, the names of 10,000 players figure in this edition.

Thousands were unable to get copies of previous baseball editions. Order from your newsdealer now.

Repetition

Repetition fastens a matter in the mind. An Advertisement appearing ten times is more effective than one ten times as large appearing but once.—Jewelers' Circular.

Nut Creams

Roll three cupfuls of granulated sugar with one cup of rich cream. Cook until it reaches the soft ball stage when dropped into cold water; take from the fire, add a cupful broken nut meats and stir until it begins to thicken. Turn into a buttered pan, and when nearly cold mark into squares. In place of cream rich milk with a tablespoonful of butter may be used.

Work Dresses

Nothing is so neat and serviceable for work dresses as shirtwaist dresses of gingham or percale. As the waists invariably wear out sooner than the skirts, make two waists for each dress, wearing them alternately so that in case they fade, all will look alike. This is not only an economy of material and sewing, but also lightens the work of laundering, as both waists are generally worn before the skirt is soiled enough to wash.

Song of the Night

Lo, we have struggled with the day,
Held in its strenuous hosts at bay,
Now night her dreamy shuttle plies,
Let us enlarge our lethargies!

Our spirits have been tensely strung;
Into the melee have we flung;
Now God's kind stars march up the skies,
Let us enlarge our lethargies!

There is a time for strife and stress,
For ardor and for steadfastness,
Now darkness folds us motherwise,
Let us enlarge our lethargies!

Success or failure—both have passed;
The calm has come. At last, at last,
The land of vision opens lies;
Let us enlarge our lethargies!

To Whiten Hands

A safe bleach for the hands is to rub them well with a lotion made of equal parts of lemon juice and glycerine. Let this dry on the hands and wear a heavy pair of gloves all night. In the morning rinse off the lotion with hot water, into which put a few drops of tincture of benzoin.

FOR CODLING MOTH

Spraying Demonstration at County Home May 11 and 12.

A spraying demonstration for codling moth and other chewing insects attacking the apple will be given May 11 and 12. About all the blossoms will be down by that time which is the proper time to spray, placing the poison in the flower of the apple before the petals close, ready for the young worms. Bordeaux mixture, the greatest of all fungicides, can be used in connection with arsenate of lead or Paris green at one application for fungus diseases, leaf-blight, bitter rot, etc. Paris green, by reason of the free acid, burns the foliage if used too strong, but if lime water is added or used with Bordeaux mixture no injury will result. Paris green is also variable in strength and washes off with every shower.

The worm or larva of the codling moth can be found underneath the rough bark of the host plant or under rubbish nearby during the winter, transforming into the pupa or chrysalis stage some time in April and changing into the adult or winged moth a week or so later, about time the blossoms open. The moths are seldom seen as they fly and lay their eggs at night on the young fruit or the leaves nearby. In about a week the young hatch out, entering the apple at the flower end where we have placed the poison for his first meal. About ten days later another application is given to catch the stragglers. The second brood, if any, will develop and appear about the first of August. The female moth will lay her eggs upon the fruit which will hatch in a few days and enter the apple from the side where two or more cluster together. Two more applications will destroy about all of them, leaving the fruit perfect. The same application given plum and peach, perhaps somewhat weaker solution, will control the curculion, or snout beetle, which stings the fruit.

CUBAN LETTER

Marines Make Good Showing in Field Meet.

Camp Columbia, Havana, Cuba, April 30, 1908.

Editor Gazette:

Tuesday we had the first field meet of the season, simply a preliminary for the great meet in July. Teams were entered from each organization in Camp and the winners of each event will be trained for the final. The Marines made a very creditable showing and we expect to make a good score in the final contest. The most interesting events were the feats of horsemanship, in which the Cavalry excelled. One good event is the "reaching contest," in which the men, from the horses' backs, pick articles off the ground; the hat, then the revolver, gloves, sabre, and handkerchief are picked up in the proper order and all placed in the proper place. The one returning to the starting point first is the winner.

The most amusing event is the shoe race. All the contestants' shoes are placed in a pile. The men then run 50 yards in their stocking feet and find their own shoes, put them on and get back to the starting point. When a man gets hold of the wrong shoe he throws it as far away as possible, so about a minute after the start you see shoes flying in all directions. Some of the boys are still hunting their shoes. The meet lasted all day and the afternoon events were run off in a pouring rain.

Tomorrow the Commanding Officer will inspect all the troops of the Camp. The inspection is in heavy marching order and the men are not pleased with the prospect of standing in the hot sun in heavy marching order for a couple of hours, but immediately after the inspection the "pay wagon" will be here and a man can't feel bad on pay day.

The beach offers great attraction to the boys this hot weather and as the government owns a bath-house there, which is open to the boys every day, they spend a great deal of their leisure time in bathing.

Very truly,
Vance Ealy,
Corporal U. S. M. C.

LETTER TO E. S. CASTEEL

Dear Sir: Two cans of paint look alike; two paints look alike, when opened; two jobs look alike, so long as they're new—unless one is scant. They are far from alike: one is paint and the other is trash. The gallon price is not far from alike. They don't cost alike. One takes 10 gallons to paint a house; the other takes 20. The cost of one job is $50; the other $100—it may be $90—the job that cost least is the good one; wears twice as long as the other.

There are two ways of telling good paint: by the name; by the number of gallons it takes for a job—least gallons, best paint. By the name Devoe; by least gallons.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & CO.
P. S.—Metzger Hardware and House Furnishing Co. sells our paint.
